

I have traveled extensively for many years and create paintings from my personal and visual experiences. The more affection I feel for the location, the more successful the final image. The process of painting is extremely exhilarating and provides a great impetus to travel the world. Travel and art allow me to combine my two passions.

I start with various images and transform them into accessible personal expressions. For me, the creative process begins with capturing thousand of images that are narrowed down to a select few. I weigh a variety of elements and use the medium appropriate to the subject matter and mood I want to evoke.

Working with watercolors, pastels, oils, and various methods of printmaking, I have numerous tools of expression available to me. I want to guide the viewer into the world of my own personal observations and sensibilities. I am constantly discovering new delights in painting and my art.
